CALL FOR PAPERS

The Towson Journal of International Affairs is accepting submissions for publication. The submission criteria is as follows:

- The journal seeks to publish original arguments that show extensive, high-level research.
- The primary focus and argument of a submitted manuscript should lie in the field of international relations. Papers focusing on domestic politics will not be considered for publication, unless the topic is the domestic politics that surround a given country's foreign policy.
- Student papers can range from 3,000 to 7,000 words (roughly 10-25 pages), with the ideal length falling between 5,000 and 6,000 words.
- Submissions must use footnotes in accordance with the Chicago Manual of Style.
- Authors of accepted papers agree to allow the editorial board to engage in editing of the manuscript for style, although substantive changes will not be made. Authors will be given the right of final review of their manuscript, and they should expect to be in regular correspondence with the journal as their manuscript proceeds through each stage of the editing process on its way to final publication.
- Paper Format: All submissions must be double spaced, 12-point font in Times New Roman. Pages should be numbered in the bottom right corner, have 1-inch margins, with left side alignment, and the paper should have a title page. The authors' identifying information should be restricted to the cover page.
- Authors should prepare an abstract of their work of no more than 200 words.

Papers will be evaluated using both substantive and stylistic criteria. Too many problems with the written presentation of a work may disqualify it even if the argument or subject is compelling.

TOWSON UNIVERSITY JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

LETTER FROM THE EDITORS

Dear Readers,

We are happy to present to you the Spring 2021 edition of the Towson University Journal of International Affairs. This is a special volume created to mark the launch of our inaugural, “TJIA Roundtables: Explorations in IR” discussions. Along with their corresponding video recordings, these articles are designed to provide insight into a variety of contemporary issues in world politics. The Roundtables themselves were organized around four distinct topics: Turkey’s relationship with the West, social justice within marginalized communities, China’s challenge to the contemporary global leadership, and how developing states have tried to address the massive crises of 2020. In this special issue, we are proud to publish the individual articles that each participant prepared in support their Roundtable presentation.

The “TJIA Roundtables: Explorations in IR” series will recur every semester, featuring analyses of current events like those included in this issue. (The talks are posted on the “Events” page in the “TJIA Roundtables” section of the journal’s web site and on the TJIA YouTube channel.) The topics of each Roundtable will vary each semester to reflect the changing circumstances of world politics and the research interests of the Roundtable participants.

It is the journal’s mission to provide a platform through which the curious and the scholarly can engage in a civil discourse that accords with disciplinary norms and standards. This issue is a unique reflection of that mission. Unlike other issues, its exclusive focus on urgent contemporary problems highlights the journal’s spirit of intellectual engagement by undergraduate students with the world around them. While most issues also feature articles by graduate students and professors, in this issue we have chosen to emphasize the contributions that undergraduates can make to our understanding of the world. We, the editors of the Towson University Journal of International Affairs, are therefore especially pleased to present this special Spring 2021 issue, and we hope that readers find these articles useful in their own scholarly endeavors.

Sincerely,

Everett Shirliff, Darius White, and Dwight Myvett

Editor-in-Chief Team
